

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A method for controlling aging compensation in an OLED display having one or more light emitting elements includes the steps of periodically measuring the change in display output to calculate a correction signal; restricting 5 the change in the correction signal at each period; and applying the correction signal to the OLED display to effect a correction in the display output.